

drinker to drink the same amount of beers as the drinker, until the drinker had had his fill. Would any reasonable person give the non-drinker the option of, "you drink those beers or you're out of a job!" Such is the common state of many places of employment. If listening to some music is so important to some, doesn't that tell you that it has gotten out of control. They can't handle working without it. Strange, mankind had gotten along pretty well for several millennia without "canned" music.

Propaganda Terminals

Finally, we need to be aware the radios are non-stop talking machines. We may work with people who are the living expressions of what they listen to, but never would it be accepted that they talk in the same manner to their fellow employees. No worker would be tolerated to speak constantly to fellow workers declaring their views, without so much as a stop for breath or allowing the listener to respond. The radio accomplishes that amazing feat! It pours forth its opinions without the opportunity for the listener to respond with, "Hey, what you said is dead wrong and unacceptable!" It serves as one of the most powerful brain washing techniques that exist.

Time For Social Reform

As society changes, we need to raise an alert for social reforms necessary for the good of all. The introduction of "canned" music over the airwaves has brought about the time of need. I am calling for men and women to rise up and call for treating others with a love and respect that should be found in all civilized countries of the world. We have forgotten that! Too many are living to please self to the scorn of their neighbors basic human rights. The right to their own mind and beliefs without being able to compel their neighbor to listen to their choices.

Since those who cleave to their "musical adictions" won't just respect others, we need to start putting the pressure on our society. If we don't, many will be forced to continue working with blaring obscene music with no recourse. Their only choice will be to endure it or be on the unemployment line.
